

Grandparents are gold.

Billie

Helping Hand
new aged care

These are my grandparents... Grandpa and Babcia. I used to see them during the year at things like birthdays and Christmas, but now I've been spending more time with them. I used to get a bit bored at their place but that was before I heard all their amazing stories and found out all the things we have in common. It made me realise that grandparents really are gold.

Here are some questions I asked them. Why don't you ask your grandparents some of these too? And maybe share some of your own answers as well!

Meet my family at:

www.helpinghand.org.au/unspoken-truths

What was Mum/Dad like when they were growing up?

What was school like? What was your favourite class?

What did you do for fun?

Can you tell me about your cultural traditions.

What were your parents like? Where were they from?

Where's your favourite place in the world?

What was your first job?

How much money did you make?

Do you remember your first date? Who was it with?

Did you remember your first kiss? Who was it with?

When do you remember being the most happy?

What was your wedding day like?

Who are your heroes?

What would you consider the most important inventions during your lifetime?

Who are/were your friends?

What was your first car? What did you pay for it?

What were you doing when you were my age?

What's been the highlight of your life?

What's the greatest piece of advice you've been given?

Do you have any advice for me?